

Nomination for 2011

Tjellström Award

Nominations are called for the 2011 Tjellström Award.

The Tjellström Award is an international award presented by the Institute for Reconstructive Sciences in Medicine (iRSM) to an individual or group exemplifying excellence and demonstrating significant contributions in the field of reconstruction and rehabilitation of the head and neck.

The recipient of the Tjellström Award is made by an international committee, the Tjellström Award Committee.

The 2011 Tjellström Award will be made publicly at the Third International Symposium on Bone Conduction Hearing-Craniofacial Osseointegration, 23–26 March 2011, Sarasota, Florida.

The following criteria are applied in selecting an individual or group for consideration for the Tjellström award. The award:

- ...is broadly-based in relation to all aspects of activity that relate to reconstruction or rehabilitation of the head and neck
- ...may be made to an individual or group involved with reconstruction or rehabilitation of the head and neck.
- ...may be made to professionals or non-professionals who attempt to improve the quality of life of individuals requiring reconstruction or rehabilitation of the head and neck.
- ...recognizes excellence and a significant contribution to enhancing the quality of life of individuals requiring reconstruction and/or rehabilitation of the head and neck.
- ...is made without distinction of race, gender, social or geographic location
